Introduction:

Energy plays most important role in deciding physical quality of life. Per Capita Energy consumption is the measure of GDP of a country. However, increasing consumption of energy in its various forms affects the environment adversely. The Technologies that will permit use of energy with lesser effect on environment are in demand and are needed to be developed. Such efforts have economic overtones and due to being cost intensive have always made way for alternatives. Undoubtedly the production of energy and consequent environmental degradation are regarded to damage the natural heritage of mankind. Whereas the overall development is dependent upon the consumption of energy its damaging influence raises questions on sustainability of development. The researchers work in different directions. There are researches continuing in the field of energy and there are other in the field of Environment who tend to bring out facts contrary to energy use. The creation of compatibility alongwith emphasis on the preservation of heritage for transfer to posterity seems to have crystallized.

This conference is an attempt towards bringing together the researches on energy, environment and sustainability. It is expected that these areas will be addressed by the participants. The areas to be covered in the conference will include but are not limited to

- Energy demand and forecast
- Fuels and Combustion
- Electricity distribution
- Thermal Power
- Hydropower
- Nuclear Power
- Pollution
- Development and Planning
- Environment
