ANATOMY OF A RESEARCH

Nina Wintermeyer is a master's student of English-Speaking Cultures at the Julius Maximilians University of Würzburg, where she has completed a Bachelor of Arts in English and American literary and cultural studies, and political and social studies. She has been awarded the JMU-Flagler Transatlantic Culture Junior Fellowship, Flagler College, St. Augustine, Florida in Fall 2022. Her research revolves around intersectional feminist literary and cultural theory, as well as Shakespeare studies, academic activism, and post- and anti-colonial thought. Further areas of interest include popular culture, women's literary history, contemporary poetry, and museum studies. She has written a thesis on- Trauma and sexual assault in Blythe Baird and Rupi Kaur's (spoken word) poetry. Her recent work "A Feminist Scholarship Toolkit" was published in the collection- INSIGHTS in 2023.

In this talk, Nina will discuss her current project on women's literature at the crossroads of commercial success and cultural capital. Grounded in work on contemporary poetry and new media writing, the talk will bring forward research questions about women's location in literary production as well as the lack of value and authority with which their work is often associated with.
